Let's get right into today's discussion, Fixed Income vs. equity.

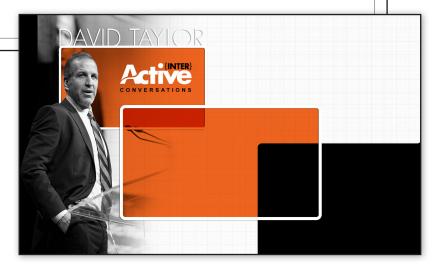

Investors have enjoyed a 30 year bull-run in bonds providing strong risk adjusted returns. However, with rates at historic lows is this the point at which the market will shift towards equities?

There has been quite a bit of commentary on this topic with no clear consensus on if this shift is underway. Additionally, recent research point towards a recovery in equity fund flows.

Question 1:

Let's let our managers weigh in on this. How do you view this so called "Great Rotation"?
